Re: Food packing // Trip Advisor

In the middle of busy central London on June 28th Feed the Hungry UK, alongside partner organisation Rise Against Hunger, arrived at the head office of Trip Advisor UK to set up for a food packing event.

Trip Advisor are currently running an internal campaign which sees their staff freed up to volunteer for projects that grab their attention. After an easy set up the event began and with 3 shifts available many of the staff got involved throughout the day. An amazing 50 thousand meals were successfully packed. This figure is truly amazing considering they had to contend with a power failure and fire alarm at various points.

The meals packed by the staff at Trip Advisor are now being processed in the Feed the Hungry UK warehouse and are scheduled to be sent to Feed the Hungry projects in Kenya.

The nutritious food, full of vitamins and rice, will help ensure the 162,000 children that Feed the Hungry support around the world will continue to be fed day in day out as part of an educational programme.

Trip Advisor are one of many corporate companies that have got involved in packing food with Rise Against Hunger and Feed the Hungry UK. Kraft Heinz have been a major contributor and also HP computers. Your organisation can get involved and help put an end to world hunger by 2030!

Will you rise to the challenge and feed the hungry?
